

TEUTONS AND BULGARS ARE NOW UNITED

UNION OF ARMIES OPERATING AGAINST SERBIA HAS BEEN AT LAST EFFECTED.

CONTROL RAILWAY LINE

Object of Campaign Attained When Way to Constantinople is Opened—Berlin Denies French Successes.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, Nov. 8.—The fall of Nish has united solidly the main Bulgarian forces and the Austro-German armies advancing from the north. Hitherto their communications consisted merely of tentative reaching out of advance guards.

The Bulgarians and their allies now hold considerably more than half of Serbia, and command the Nish railway which has been one of the chief objectives of their campaign. From Nish the Bulgarian line now runs north in a slight curve encircling the Morava river to Krievitz where it joins the main Austro-German forces. From that point the invaders' line turns at a right angle and runs due west across the broadest part of Serbia. The rough semi-circle made by this line is still contracting, and as it does so according to German reports, taking a heavy toll of Serbian prisoners.

In southern Serbia the fortunes of war are less auspicious for the invaders. There the Bulgarians apparently have received a severe check from the Serbians assisted by French and British troops.

Berlin Report.

Berlin, Nov. 8.—Among the items given out by the Overseas News Agency today was the following:

"Foreign press stories reporting a rebellion in Bulgaria, saying there has been mutiny among the Bulgarian troops and telling of the conquest of Uzun and Velez, by Serbian, British and French troops, are officially discounted by the Bulgarian war office as inventions."

"The British and French are suffering one failure after another in Macedonia. Uzun and Velez are finally in Bulgarian hands."

The Serbian town of Krievitz, on the railroad about fifty miles northwest of Nish, has been occupied by German troops, it was officially announced today.

French Offensive Gains.

Saloniki, Nov. 7, via London, Nov. 8.—The French offensive against the Bulgarians is proceeding surely but slowly, because of the difficulties of the terrain in the sector northeast of Strumitza. Kachali and Neimis were occupied the fifth, and Doloria was stored yesterday, it is reported here.

The French advance toward the north is said to be continuing uninterrupted today with a British contingent on the right wing.

The Serbs are reported to have repulsed heavy Bulgarian attacks in the Krievitz sector, and the Bulgarians also have materially extended their line, which reaches northeast beyond Grasko and west beyond the Thema river to the Kavadar region.

To Affect a Junction.

Paris, Nov. 8.—French troops have occupied Koscik and Babuna heights, which command Pletvar Pass, through which runs the Perlepe-Kavadar road, and are expected to affect a junction with the Serbian army occupying the northwestern slope of the Babuna range, says a Monastir dispatch to the Matin.

Roumania for Neutrality.

Paris, Nov. 9.—Premier Briatano, desirous of obtaining the views of members of parliament upon the international situation before opening of the coming session, is holding informal conferences with them, says a Matin dispatch from Bucharest. All the members seen thus far by the premier, it is reported, have agreed with him that the government is following the wisest course in maintaining neutrality for the present, at least.

PEABODY STUDENTS HAVE FALSE ALARM

Pupils in School, Where Many Lost Lives in Disastrous Fire, in Panic Today.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 8.—The cry of "Fire," that rang through the old high school building here where two hundred pupils of St. John's parochial school, recently destroyed by fire, had assembled for their studies, today caused a panic and a wild scramble for the exits. There were no fatalities, although a boy who jumped through a window, broke his arm. The pupils evidently were still nervous from their recollection of the fire on October 28, which resulted in the loss of twenty-one lives. The sight of steam escaping from a radiator frightened one of the pupils, and his shrill cry was instantly followed by a stampede.

ASSOCIATION WORK TOLD TO PRESIDENT

Recreation Offered By Y. M. C. A. In Prisoners' Camps in Europe Saving Feature for Soldiers.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Nov. 8.—John R. Mott, general secretary of the International committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, told President Wilson today that the committee's work in camps of Europe, where 3,000,000 men are now being held as prisoners of war, was doing much to prevent moral and physical deterioration of the men.

In nearly all the prison camps in Germany, Russia, Austria, France and Italy, Mr. Mott said, the committee has established branch organizations with reading and writing rooms. Musical instruments have been furnished and music in the camps, he said, has been a great factor in preventing insanity. Schools have been established with teachers from the prisoners themselves.

CRISIS ON BORDER AT NOGALES FEARED

Gen. Funston Leaves For Point Where Villa Garrison is About To Transfer Allegiance.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Douglas, Ariz., Nov. 8.—Major General Frederick Funston left today for Nogales, Arizona, where, according to official advices, the Villa garrison at the Mexican town just across the border, is on the verge of transferring its allegiance to General Carranza. General Villa is reported enroute to that place from Naco, Sonora, while General Manuel Dizeguez, commanding a Carranza force said to number 20,000, is making his way north from Mazatlan.

Much uneasiness prevailed last night among American and Mexican army officials. General Funston stated today, however, that no American troops have been ordered to Nogales, as yet.

SCRIPTURES UPHOLD NATIONAL DEFENSE

PRESIDENT WILSON QUOTES FROM EZEKIEL TO SUPPORT PREPAREDNESS ARGUMENT.

MUST HEED WARNINGS

In Reply to Letter From Seth Low Commending Manhattan Speech He Uses Passage From Prophet's Writings.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Nov. 8.—President Wilson finds support in the Scriptures for his policy of national defense and in a letter to Seth Low, who wrote the president commending his Manhattan club speech, quotes verses from the 33rd chapter of Ezekiel. In the letter made public today at the White House the president said:

"I am particularly gratified that you should so fully concur in the position I took in my speech to the Manhattan club. There is a quotation from Ezekiel which I have had very much in mind recently in connection with these important matters. It is the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth verses of chapter 33."

"2. Son of man, speak to the children of thy people, and say unto them, when I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of that land take a man of their coasts and set him for their watchman;

"3. If when he seeth the sword come upon the land he blow the trumpet, and say, O sword, I am thy servant, so that thou shalt not slay the people, but the sword shall be upon his own head."

"4. Then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, he shall not say, O sword, I am thy servant, so that thou shalt not slay the people, but the sword shall be upon his own head."

"5. He heard the sound of the trumpet and took not warning, his blood shall be upon him; but he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul."

"6. But if the watchman see the sword come and blow not the trumpet, and the people be taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand."

Kitchin Opposes Plan.

Representative Claude Kitchin, democratic leader of the house, told President Wilson today after an hour's conference that he could not support the administration program for national defense, but he would oppose the program because it was not only, and not as a majority leader.

"All I can say," said Representative Kitchin, as he left the White House, "is that I am not a supporter of the administration's program. I am not a supporter of the president's national defense program. The plans do not meet with my convictions, particularly with reference to the navy."

Before seeing the president, Mr. Kitchin said in an effort to make a national defense subject with an open mind and was willing to be convinced of the wisdom of the administration's program. He was asked to give him what he would consider a realistic justification for the proposed large increases in army and navy appropriations.

Mr. Kitchin said the president had said nothing which caused him to change his mind.

STUMPS WISCONSIN FAVORING FAIRBANKS

Indianapolis Man Seeks Sentiment of State Votes on Candidacy of Ex-Vice President Fairbanks.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 8.—An effort to induce voters in this state to vote for the probable candidacy of former vice President Fairbanks for president is being made by E. L. Lewis, of Indianapolis. He was here Saturday and had a conference with some of the republicans leaving for Milwaukee, where he said he intended to meet Gov. E. L. Philipp to talk over the situation with him. According to Mr. Lewis, the Root boom has received a serious set-back as the result of the defeat of the proposed New York constitution of which Root was the sponsor. Lewis said that Fairbanks is underestimated by many who have never met him. He characterizes the former vice president as "very much of a democrat and every inch an American."

Mr. Lewis said that it was Mr. Fairbanks' wish that the republicans shall in the next platform declare for the restoration of the protective tariff.

Adequate national defense. The establishment of a mercantile marine, adequate to carry the commerce of the United States into every trading post on the globe.

An efficient national organization for the promotion of American commerce and the development of American trade.

This plan, which developed along the line of the German idea of building up a scientifically constructed consular system.

Mr. Lewis said he was encouraged with the reports he is receiving and intends to visit all of the middle-western states to sound out sentiment.

DUNNE NEEDS APPEAL FOR EXTRA SESSION

WILL CALL ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE TO TAKE ACTION ON CHICAGO SUNDAY CLOSING.

WANT HOME RULE LAW

Seek City Control of Public Utilities as Well as Local Authority Over Liquor Question.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 8.—The question of home rule for Chicago, brought to a head by Mayor Thompson's recent order closing Chicago saloons on Sunday, probably will be threshed out at a special session of the Illinois legislature which Governor Dunne very likely will call to meet next Monday.

Following a parade of "wets" in Chicago yesterday, in protest against the state Sunday closing law, "wet" leaders today asked that Governor Dunne include the question of home rule in his call for a special session. They made the request by recent supreme court decision which held that many of the appropriations named by the general assembly were technically illegal.

Governor Dunne gave his assent today. Chicago city officials will attempt to obtain the passage of a measure giving Chicago home rule in the handling of its public utilities, as well as in the control of the liquor question. The "wets" will ask a general rule law, which would give any city in the state the power upon a referendum vote to control its saloons.

National headquarters will be established in this city and active work will begin at once. Thirty men of national reputation in the tobacco trade have consented to serve as officers and directors of the association.

Packer of the immigration division, are making plans to send out a team of new settlers of Wisconsin, to the end that the Department of Agriculture may assist settlers in overcoming hardships they may encounter in establishing homes.

We would like to see you communicate with this department when they encounter obstacles and drawbacks concerning which they need advice," said Commissioner Norford today. "It is the aim of the immigration division of this department simply to induce people to locate in Wisconsin. We desire to render all possible assistance in making their homes successful."

We also wish that when prospective settlers meet with unscrupulous agents and dealers they would communicate with this department to protect the prospective settler and the newcomer in every possible way.

Federal Judge Grants Writ of Habeas Corpus and Then Quashes Writ on Saturday.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 8.—The Myrland case, in which the United States circuit court for final settlement Saturday evening Federal Judge A. L. Sanborn granted a writ of habeas corpus and then after arguments quashed the writ, was today taken to the United States circuit court on an appeal.

U. S. OBJECTS TO BLOCKADE BY BRITAIN

GIVES NOTICE TO AMERICANS TO SEEK REDRESS THROUGH DIPLOMATIC CHANNEL.

SURPRISE IN ENGLAND

British Newspapers Claim American Contentions Would Destroy Effectiveness of Blockade Policy.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Nov. 8.—Publication today of the American note to Great Britain, denouncing as "ineffective, illegal and indefensible" the attempted blockade against Germany and Austria, gives notice to citizens of the United States whose legitimate foreign trade is interfered with by the allies, that they should seek redress directly through the diplomatic channels of their own government rather than through prize courts.

The United States in its latest note to Great Britain, made public here on Sunday, covering exhaustively British interference with American trade since the beginning of the European war, declares that the so-called blockade instituted by the allies against enemy countries is "ineffective, illegal, and indefensible." Notice is served that the American government "can not submit to the curtailment of its neutral rights, and it can not 'with complacency suffer further abridgment of its rights and interests.'"

Ambassador Page, to whom the note was sent by special messenger for delivery to the London foreign office, was instructed by Secretary Lansing to "impress most earnestly" upon the British government that the United States "must insist that the relations between it and this country be governed not by a policy of expediency, but by those established rules of

BAPTIZE YOURSELF IN MUDDY JORDAN

MECKNESS AND DEVOTION ESSENTIAL TO ENTRANCE TO PROMISED LIFE, SAYS REV. JOHN MCKINNEY.

SAVIOR SHOWED WAY

Jesus Christ Works in Us and Directs Our Lives to Glory and Advantage of God.

"There is some devotion to God lacking in the lives of all men," said the Rev. John McKinney, rector of Christ Episcopal church, yesterday morning in his sermon at the 10:30 o'clock services.
"Some phase of devotion to the Almighty is always a minus quantity in our lives. We fail to surrender our lives to our God; and we are enthralled by the gild and glamor of worldly things and conventions.
"Like the haughty captain of biblical times, we refuse to baptize ourselves in the muddy waters of the Jordan. We hold aloft from the entanglements of God and willingly set our own course against his wishes. We are proud and are moulded more by the ways of the world than those courses in which our conscience dictates."
"God is working great things in us," said the Rev. McKinney, "and is everlastingly with us. If we turn away from him, we lose him. His will is exercised to our welfare of future life always, but we do not let him keep his commandments. Sell all thou hast and give up to the poor and follow Me."
"We should not deceive ourselves that we are Christians," he said, "if we do not live up to him and his teachings and ideals. He only asks our sacrifice and love for him."
"We should stop and meditate to realize his love. Take the matter of one going far away. Think of leaving home, cheerful friends, happy relationships, and all to live in the slums and tenements of the city with their sickness, disease and death; to give up silk and satin and the gutter of the upper world to don rags and meet conditions of these places."
"Would you do it? He left his throne on high to come down to earth to dwell amongst men. He came to fulfill his promise. Men had awaited this fulfillment for four thousand years and then, when he did come, they hung him on a cross and crucified him."
"Likewise we do the same. We are not willing to permit him to work in us and to mould us into his course. It is the only preparation for the life beyond that we have. It is the preparation of us to meet him after our death. We should sacrifice for him and offer some devotion. Of all the men of the earth who have been called in death none but he ever came back. In fulfillment of his promise of eternal life. Three days passed and he appeared to the Apostles."
"To live with him later we must reign with him now. There is one thing we must do to take our own identity and that is the preparation of our souls for the meeting that soul to God as he gave it: pure and unstained with sin."
"He knows the world's work must be done and he calls on us for our accounting. We must give a showing of our stewardship. And if we fail to enter this eternal life. He has promised we have no excuse to make. We have no excuse for the way we have misused our talents; not for the advance of God but for the glory of ourselves. When we are stripped of all his promises then we realize that they were only loaned for a short time — our stay here on earth."

"It is not whether we are rich or poor that counts. It is our devotion. He demands our service here and He is sincere without offense."
"Christ went to Jerusalem knowing that he was to be crucified and be put to death by the Jews on the cross. He did not do this for the glory of any kingdom on earth, but for the glory of his Father who said: 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'"
"The holy ghost has methods to turn the hearts of men. He wills to work in harmony and repentance in the lives of all of us. The enemies of Jesus Christ could not convict him of sin. Even the Roman governor could not find him guilty and turned him over to the condemnation of the people by the Jewish high priests. Neither can any writer be able to convict him of sin. He was the perfect man. He led the perfect way and he was the perfection of obedience."

COUNTY BOARD WILL ENJOY TWO DINNERS

Training School Entertains On Wednesday and Superintendent Whipple On Thursday.

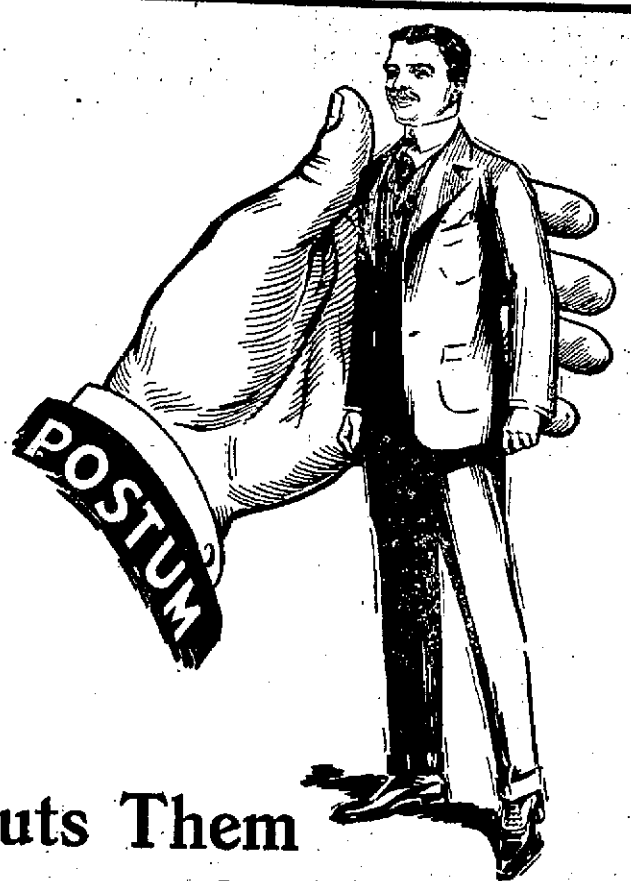

Members of the county board will combine the pleasure with business at their annual session which opens Tuesday afternoon. Already two invitations for dinner have been received, one from Principal Lowth of the teachers' training school, for Wednesday, and the second from Superintendent C. S. Whipple of the county asylum and poor farm for Thursday. In a letter of invitation sent to each member of the board, Mr. Lowth announces that a brief program of music and short talks will follow the dinner at the training school. The reasons for giving the dinner are:
(1) It enables the board to keep in touch with the school which operates both the board and the school; (2) it gives the students a needed practice in serving a dinner and in entertaining invited guests; (3) it is a means of both pleasure and profit for all concerned in social and educational ways.
The visit of the county board to the asylum and poor farm is an annual event which will be noteworthy this year since it is the first since Mr. Whipple has been in charge of the institution. According to County Clerk Lee the real purpose of the visit to the county farm is for the inspection of the newly installed water mains and hydrants.

WORKING BALANCE IN CITY TREASURY

City Treasurer's Report Shows Substantial Amounts in Various Funds.—New School Loan Needed.

That there is a substantial balance in the various funds of the city is evident from the report of City Treasurer George W. Muenchow, which was filed this morning with City Clerk P. Hammarlund at the Tuesday meeting. In the ward funds there will be around seven thousand dollars left over from present prospects, which will go into the one general highway district fund. Because of the resolution passed Saturday by the council for the establishing of the city as a unit for highway and improvement purposes.

With the transfer of the income tax, the general fund shows a healthy balance of $16,303.40, which is more than the council allowed in the new budget for all next year. The school fund balance of $4,374.74 will not last over until tax collection and a third loan will probably be necessary. The other balances are as follows: Fire and water, $7,055.05; lighting, $3,328.48; bridge, $5,743.37; library, $1,318.18; first ward, $7,236.42; second ward, $5,785.58; third ward, $995.91; fourth ward, $1,850.88; fifth ward, $387.48; sewerage, $13,008.75; water works bonded debt, $2,936; and street oiling, $3,244.11.
When complete tax returns are made by the county, city employees will be able to determine the tax amounts to be collected next year. The county board, it is thought, will file the certified statement of the county and state rate during the next two weeks, at which time the city rate will be definite. The approximate rate of 10.37 per thousand is the most accurate figure that the city can figure at the present time. It is practically a sure thing that the rate will be less than eleven dollars per thousand.

JANESVILLE FOWLS GO TO EXPOSITION

Five Birds from Edward Amerpohl's Coops Will be Shown at San Francisco.

This city has in times past been the home of many prize fowls. They have been exhibited at various fairs and shows, and have won their full share of blue ribbons and prizes. But it now remains for the aristocratic birds, owned by Edward Amerpohl, to take a trip across the continent to compete with the world, for international honors. There are seven birds in the exhibit, five pullets and two cockerels of the white crested Polish breed. They are perfect beauties with shining black plumage and a fluffy snow-white crest. They started Wednesday on their long trip going first to Milwaukee, where they join a special car of Wisconsin birds in charge of an expert attendant. From there they will go to San Francisco, where an international exhibit of the Poultry Raisers' association will be held at the exposition, beginning on Nov. 18. It will undoubtedly be a very interesting contest, as these are the habits of poultry from all over the world. The national association is greatly interested in fostering the poultry industry and plan to have a carload of birds shipped from each state to the show. The state poultry association is also co-operating, both by advice and financial aid, in helping to secure a worthy representation of the poultry interests of this state. Mr. Amerpohl is an enthusiastic grower of fine fowls as a pastime, and is to be congratulated on raising such good specimens. It is only the best that are worth exhibition at this show, and though these fancy birds may not bring home the blue ribbons, still the honor of a chance in the competition is a great one.

MERCHANTS PLEASED WITH SALE RESULTS

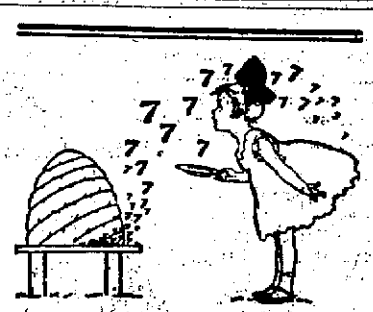

Refund and Booster Week Proved Advantageous to Stockkeepers Combined in Feature.

That the refund and booster sale was a big advantage to merchants who participated last week in the feature is the contention today after review of the week past. While the opening days were only a little above the average in sales, the remaining three days of the week successfully showed salesmen and customers alike. The five per cent refund to out of town purchasers proved a good drawing card. According to figures compiled this morning by Miss Genevieve Lynch, a member of the chamber of commerce, the refund was $270,000 ago. Yards were closed the week ending Nov. 14, 1914, being quarantined.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor:
What's answered? One grocer advertises 22 pounds of best quality sugar for one dollar, or 100 pounds for $5.00. Another grocer advertises 21 pounds for $1.00, or 100 pounds for $5.15. Where does the catch come in? It puts the price of the days when Mr. Ehle sold strawberries at 8 cents a box, or three for 25 cents.

Saturday's Market.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Last week's closing cattle trade was decidedly weak. The average price of beef steers at 12¢ to 13¢ below last week's and $1.05 below high week in July at $8.50.

While receipts were large, the combined total of six leading western markets was only 1,000 larger than the corresponding week a year ago and 70,000 below the record.
Prevailing hog prices at Chicago are highest in the country, the tops at 12¢ to 13¢ below last week's and 46¢ to 75¢ higher than western points, which will undoubtedly turn many hogs to this market.
Eleven eastern and western points received last week 500,000 hogs, the largest since June. Chicago's total was largest in over three months, but estimated average weight at 192 lbs, was lightest on record, 194 lbs. 194 lbs. previous week and 221 lbs. a year ago.
The week's arrivals are estimated at 64,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs and 80,000 sheep, against 68,224 cattle, 153,000 hogs and 82,425 sheep two weeks ago. Yards were closed the week ending Nov. 14, 1914, being quarantined.

ONE FUND.
Do the taxpayers of the city fully understand that by the passage of the resolution wiping out the old system of ward funds for street improvements that three-eighths of a mill per dollar taxation for this purpose is saved their pocketbooks? Not only that, but by creating the one general fund the improvements of the streets of the whole city can be accomplished when needed without the serious handicap through lack of funds. This is illustrated in the case of the present year in several of the wards where depleted appropriations have caused important work to be stopped at critical periods even though an adjacent ward, with plenty of money in its fund, is more directly benefited than the ward in which the work is being done, but the money could not be borrowed from that fund. This is true, particularly in the work about to be commenced in the fifth ward sewerage district. Here is a vast line of pipes to take care of the surface water and must be paid for, under the old system, by the fifth ward fund. The first has a surplus of money in its fund, while the fifth is sadly depleted. In the third ward, for instance, the storm sewer that is being laid on Oakland avenue really will ultimately drain part of the second ward, but under the old system had to be paid for out of the third ward fund, entirely, while there was a surplus in the second ward appropriation. By raising an equal sum per assessed valuation in each ward, placing it all in one general fund, more can be accomplished with a great saving to the city as a whole than otherwise. The old ward fund idea was merely a survival of the scheme of political preferment and election pail for the ward aldermen and did not have existence in any other city in the state, but was peculiar to Janesville alone. Now that it is done away with and the fund is all one, we may expect more results at less expense to the individual taxpayer.

GENUINE GLOOM.
There is genuine gloom at the White House which, for the time being at least, even the festive attending the President's approaching marriage cannot dissipate. It has been realized by the President and his close advisers that he would experience great difficulty in controlling congress during the coming session, but it was believed that substantial democratic victories in this week's elections would materially strengthen his hands and that his friends would be able to urge upon recalcitrant congressmen that as Mr. Wilson was stronger than his party, they would be jeopardizing their own political welfare by opposing him, or any legislation he might propose. Now, however, this is materially changed and some new argument must be found if the growing spirit of insurrection in the democratic ranks in congress is to be crushed. Another blow to the President and to his chief adviser, Mr. McAdoo, is the defeat of Representative John J. Fitzgerald, who ran for the New York majority against Mr. Fitzgerald, who is one of the frank and ablest democrats in the House, as well as chairman of the Appropriations committee, has always been a thorn in the flesh to Mr. Wilson. Mr. Fitzgerald has not hesitated to castigate the present administration unmercifully for its extravagance in doling out the public funds, and he has been severe in his criticism of Mr. McAdoo's mismanagement of the Treasury department. For these reasons his nomination for a judicial position was hailed with joy by the President and Mr. McAdoo and they did all in their power to promote his election, but without success.

INDIAN SUMMER.
"Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this Son of York."—Richard III.
After our strange and weird contrasting summer months this glorious fall weather with its summer atmosphere comes as a welcome respite from rains and chill winds. It is the Indian Summer period of our northern climate and one which is enjoyed by all. Even though the trees are denuded of their leaves, the flowers have ceased to bloom, the crisp nights and mornings and the almost summer temperature during the days makes it a period that delights both old and young.

The Milwaukee Daily News has gone a bit into the research of the following bit of interesting data regarding the climatic conditions that is well worth remembering. It says: "The origin of the term probably dates back to the early settlement of this country, and the story is as follows: The settler raised his winter food supply during the hot months, while the Indian, who lazily passed his time lounging around during the hot spell, would be called to action by the first frosty weather in fall which would give him the hunting fever. "The period of comparatively warm, dry and pleasant weather following closely upon the first frosts of the season, gave the Indian an opportunity properly to dry and preserve the meat resulting from his hunting expeditions, and this short period became known as Indian Summer."

"Indian Summer in this latitude occurs usually during the latter part of October or early part of November, varying in different years, and is characterized by warm bright sunshine during the day with cool frosty nights, light wind and more or less smokiness or haziness of the atmosphere. The air, especially at night time, abounds with ozone, a highly disinfectant agent, and the exhilarating effect of this weather is made known to every one. The present Indian Summer has been especially noticeable, following closely the coldest and one of the wettest summers on record, according to figures given out by the local weather bureau office."

But the winter months are at hand and we may expect cold, snowy season if we may believe the signs of Dame Nature given us. Meanwhile let us enjoy the blessings at hand.

There still are, we are not overly pleased to observe, actors who consider the cross examination of woman until she cries a successful feat.

You doubtless have noticed that theoretical battleships continue to be destroyed by constructive bombs dropped from imaginary flying machines.

A War Story.
The jig was up.
Alas! Alas!
Poor Percy loved.
Each charming lass.

Night was descending as Private Percy, erstwhile Piccadilly nut, lay breathing his last on the field of battle, with a cannon ball in his big heart.

Overhead the new chimera, shells played the pianoforte scale as they burst, and a Zeppelin called plaintively to its mate.

"Here you are, Percy, old top, take a swig of this champagne, you need it more than I do," said his former fellow-nut, Private Algy.

Percy drank gratefully, then raised himself on his elbow and gasped: "I say, Algy."

"Anything at all, old top," promised Algy.

"Well Leonora my last thoughts were of her; tell her I'm kissing her ten cent photograph," whispered Percy.

"Right."

"And Algy—lower."

Algy put his ear to Percy's lips, and heard the faint request: "Tell Harriet, Maudie and Jane the same thing."

Night had descended.

CEREMONIES START IN JAPAN FOR THE CORONATION SERVICE

Industrial Exhibits in Kiota, Korea.—Effect is Far Fetched on Japan And Asiatic Countries.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Seoul, Korea, Nov. 8.—The coronation of the Japanese Emperor on Nov. 10 at Kiota is having an appropriate effect in Korea.

The opening of a big industrial exhibition arranged to show the world what Japan has accomplished for Korea during the five years of Japanese administration.

With imposing ceremony and in the presence of a great crowd of people gathered from all parts of the ancient Hermit Kingdom, the exhibition was inaugurated by His Imperial Highness, Prince Kan-in and his consort the Princess Kan-in, who came here as the personal representatives of the Emperor and Empress of Japan.

On arrival at Seoul, which is gorgeously decorated and illuminated, the members of the royal family were received by the Korean Prince Yi and Princess Yi and by many military, naval and civil officials and representative citizens.

School children occupied a prominent place along the line of procession to the official residence of Governor-General Terachi, who placed at the disposal of the visitors.

For the first time in their lives thousands of country-folk came to see the inauguration of the exhibition witnessed on a plane in flight.

The machine was driven by Ozaki, the son of Yukio Ozaki, Japanese minister of justice, and circled high above the park during the initial ceremonies.

Dinner parties, meetings of the Red Cross and Ladies Patriotic Association, a military review and a celebration by the railroad bureau of the completion of 1,000 miles of railroad tracks were among the features of the opening.

A Great Exhibit.

The fair is a comprehensive presentation of the achievements and industrial progress of the empire.

Impressive upon observers as indicating the progress of the country along modern and progressive lines.

The exhibit includes over 32,000 products of the industries of the provinces of Korea, articles produced by work undertaken with the imperial monetary grants and articles relating to education, engineering, communications, finance, sanitation, charity and relief, police affairs, justice and fine art.

Side by side with the new are frequently placed products of the old Korean regime with the idea of bringing to public notice the results of the new Japanese administration.

About 100 Japanese journalists who assembled here to see the exhibition expressed a resolute opinion that the appreciation of the great progress and improvement achieved in Korea (the Japanese name for Korea) during the past five years, and voicing the opinion that the progress and development of the peninsula.

Speech is Honored.

A feature of the exhibition period was a luncheon given by Governor-General Terachi to honor Dr. Robert E. Speer of the United States, secretary to the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and at which were present Ransford S. Miller, the American consul-general, Bishop Harris and other American missionary workers.

General Terachi made the point that the fundamental object of the exposition was to give the people an opportunity to study how the different branches of national industry might be developed to best advantage.

Dr. Speer, replying, compared conditions in Korea today with those of eighteen years ago when he was here on an inspection tour and expressed the opinion that all intelligent people would appreciate Japan's endeavors not to make Koreans subjects, but to uplift them so that they might become equal as well as loyal subjects of the Japanese Emperor.

In his view, it was proper and correct that Japan, having annexed Korea, would seek to assimilate and nationalize the Korean people.

Cause of Clamor.

Tokio, Nov. 8.—No subject has caused more of a clamor of public discussion in Japan in recent years than an imperial decree legally resuscitating the family of the late General Nogai, the hero of Port Arthur and the hero of the Japanese nation.

A storm of protest has risen from all parts of the Empire because of the fact that General Nogai, who committed harakiri with his wife on the night of the funeral of Emperor Meiji, left a will expressing his disapproval of the custom of adopting heirs in Japan and requesting that his family become extinct.

General Nogai's later life was saddened by the loss of his two sons in the war with Russia. He was constantly requested by relatives and friends to adopt an heir in fulfillment of Japanese custom and thus to continue the succession of his house.

Nogai, however, refused, declaring that to his mind the practice of adoption had worked very badly and often had resulted in bringing discredit to the family.

Not a Relation.

The successor to Count Nogai is not a blood relation. He is Motomoto Mori, younger brother of Viscount Motomoto Mori. An imperial decree ordering Mr. Mori to take over the house of the late General Nogai as well as the title of Count was issued on the third anniversary of the death of the hero of Port Arthur. The fact that the new head of the house has already made application for the family relics and memorials has heightened public feeling on the matter.

The new Count Nogai is receiving an endless stream of anonymous letters, some threatening and all protesting his succeeding to the name of Nogai in defiance of the wish of the great soldier.

The question occupies the foremost place in the press which quotes many jurists as holding the step illegal. It is likely that the question will come up in the next session of the Diet.

The former head of the Mori house was a daimio of Choshu clan of which the late Count Nogai was a member and this is one reason why a man of the present generation was named to the position.

The entire controversy is of a special interest, because it shows that public opinion in Japan now dares to criticize even a decree of the emperor. In former days criticism of an imperial edict would have been regarded as entirely disloyal and impossible.

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last—and insist on the genuine—always free from alcohol and injurious drugs.

FIND THE MISSING LETTER IN PACKAGE

Young Lady Clerk is Wondering What Became of Her Love Note, Which She Had Under Paper.

There is an ancient yarn about a love sick man, who lost his heart's choice, when a negligent store clerk mixed parcels containing a suit of red flannel underwear, which the youth intended for himself, and a pair of sending to his fiancée. But a certain young man of this city, whose very name resounds of the famous river Shannon, is in a worse predicament than the victim of the flannel.

This young man, who for the occasion he will call John, wrote a lovely letter to a certain good looking young lady, who has a clerical position in a dry goods clothing store. This young lady received the welcome note during the rush hours of the refund sale on Saturday and read the letter over at least a dozen times, and having heart throbs at every paragraph, between the moments in which she was engaged in mending down debts and credits. When finally satisfied she tucked the letter under some wrapping paper on her desk.

A Janesville woman purchased a gown at the store in question and the clerk who made the sale sent the gown to the office, where the girl worked, to be wrapped up. It was late in the evening, and the girl, who still was under the influence of the letter, received the gown and started to wrap it in paper preparatory to placing it in a garment box. In her haste she did not notice that she took the paper which contained her highly valued letter.

When the purchaser reached home she proudly exhibited her new gown to members of the family and friends, and was astonished to find a neatly addressed, unstamped letter in the folds of the paper. On investigating the note was uncovered and read with much interest. The letter, filled every word. The letter also told of a stag party held recently and meanwhile the young lady wonders what became of her letter.

NEW NAVY GUNS ARE BEST IN THE WORLD

Abstract of Annual Report of Bureau of Ordnance, of the United States Navy Department.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Nov. 8.—Battleships now building for the United States navy will carry 16-inch, fifty calibre, guns which are believed by ordnance experts to be the equal of the 16-inch weapons in foreign navies although of lighter weight. In his annual report, the chief of the bureau, Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss, chief of the navy ordnance bureau, says:

"With the object of keeping pace with the increased range of modern naval warfare, the bureau has increased the power of the 14-inch guns for the California, Mississippi and Idaho by increasing the length of the barrel and enlarging the chamber capacity. In order that these latest additions to the navy should carry the highest type of artillery, the bureau took the bold step of ordering the manufacture of a new type of gun, the first of which is now being completed. The first gun proved not only gave the designed velocity and pressure, but it also had the additional longitudinal strength which has been provided for has resulted in these guns having less drop than any guns of large calibre ever produced. As it stands these guns, although of 16-inch calibre and weight than the 16-inch guns now mounted abroad, are capable of penetrating the heaviest side armor of the most modern battleships, and give us the advantage of faster trajectory, with greater volume of fire, are permitted to mount on any ship of equal displacement."

"In August, 1914, a type 16-inch gun of 45 calibre length was tested. This gun, which was designed to be as powerful a gun as is in existence today."

The report shows that the navy's armament has been kept well up to the mark. The 16-inch guns having been replaced on all ships of the first line; that anti-air rifles of sizes up to 4-inch have been designed, and that mounted on submarines have been built. The latter weapons will be given an increased elevation so that they may fire on high angles.

Difficulty has been encountered in placing contracts for a sufficient number of the new armor piercing projectiles for big guns now being used by the navy. The price due to the war is indicated by the fact that projectiles were purchased in 1913 at $220 each, while those contracted for in 1914 are $415. Part of the increased cost, however, is due to the new design. Satisfactory 8-inch projectiles have been produced at the naval gun factory and larger shells are now being made there.

As to the value of armor piercing shells the report says experiments during the year have strengthened the view that missiles of this type, being high explosive in limited quantities, are superior to high explosive shells that depend wholly upon the force of an outside explosion to accomplish their mission. A French official report is quoted as showing that plain shells carrying high explosive in large quantity were "absolutely powerless" against armor of any modern battleship.

I don't know how it is in your church, comments Deacon Bert Walker, but I know that in mine if every member gave one-tenth of all he made to the Lord we could hire the finest preacher in New York city and build a church building 12 stories high and then have money enough left to save a whole army of heathens.—Kansas City Star.

Stopping a Leak.

A very good temporary stopping for a leak in either a gas or a water pipe may be produced by working powdered whiting and yellow soap into a paste. Press it into the leaking part of the pipe, and put on sufficient to make the hole airtight. This is only a temporary remedy, and should not prevent sending for the plumber at the first possible moment.

Coughs and Colds Not to Be Neglected

Anyone will realize the seriousness of neglecting a cold if he observes results of such neglect among his acquaintances. How often have you heard, "He caught cold, didn't do anything for it and it turned into"—then some dreaded disease is named!

Ordinary colds yield to prompt treatment at the beginning. That is why every family should be supplied with a reliable cough medicine—one that will heal raw and inflamed surfaces, loosen the phlegm, soothe irritation, ease the hoarseness and stop the tickling sensation in the throat that does not permit one to sleep.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is invaluable for relief of coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, tickle in throat, tightness or soreness, grippe or bronchial cough. It contains no harmful ingredients. It is healing, soothing, efficient and pleasing.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Call of the Wind.

The night lay thick over the Siletz country. High above, the pine tops sang with a roar, soft-voiced but far-reaching as thunder. Mystery and loneliness pressed upon the wilderness like a finger. It quivered the sharp ears of Black Bolt, perched forward, listening. It padded the feet of Coosnah, running ahead in the trail, but upon Siletz its touch was lost. She, too, was free of its hidden paths. Hour after hour they threaded the familiar way, and presently the forest lightened, fell away, left them at the steep shore of the Siletz river, gurgling along in the darkness, swift and shallow.

Fields and pastures lay here upon right and left and cabins stood square to the shadows. This was the headquarters of the reservation. Through the small settlement, up a lane and across a wooded area, went the trio, and presently Siletz drew rein where a sorry shack crouched forlornly beneath a mammoth fir. The sound brought to its door a bent figure that came and stood at Black Bolt's head like a shadow.

Siletz spoke in jargon, slid down, trailed the reins on the earth and entered the little house.

An hour later she stood against its closed door, facing a dusky circle of squatting figures, her trim form straight in the lamplight, her shirt open a bit at the throat, her slim hands eloquent in quiet gestures.

Near the pine table that held the fluted light stood old Kolawmie, a splendid illustration of the white man's ways.

He might have been fifty years of age, he might have been a hundred. Pure blood of chiefs ran in his veins, and he had memories of the time when the Oregon country reached from the northern sound to the valley of the Sacramento, but the burden of progress hung heavy on his shoulders, his fingers trembled from much devotion to the Spirit of the Burning Water.

Broken in heart and soul and tribe, he dreamed out the long last days in the monotony of the reservation, sending his sons to the red-roofed school on the hill, turning them aimlessly loose upon their lands when they were through—but still throughout the country where the sign of the Siletz was seen, there were known his wise precepts, there would his call bring followers. About him gathered now a silent circle, young men who could speak good English and write essays on the evolution of man, older ones who accepted the modern modes with reservations, and a few like himself of the ancient time.

To them Siletz was speaking. "Trouble has fallen upon the Night Wind," she said sweetly, "and she comes to her friends for help. Sandry at the camp is deserted by his men. The camp falls, the work is stopped, the engines are silent at their posts, and a big contract that means much is ready to be lost—and Hampden of the Yellow Pines laughs in glee, for he has done this thing. Men there are not in the country—and to go to Portland means loss of time on the great contract. Therefore Sandry sits with his head in his hands, thus—"

With swift art she bent her dark head forward upon her palms, drooped her slim shoulders, and instantly despair loomed before the dusky circle.

"For which the heart of Siletz sickens, for she is Sandry's woman."

There was silence for a space. The girl was an artist.

"She would help him. Therefore she comes to her friends, whose hearts are large with friendship, though their hands are soft with leisure. The Siletz need not work. Will they give the free gift of labor for the Night Wind's man?"

It was a heart-speech, it was in jargon and it was successful, for with the early dawn, blue-gray with mist and sun-shot with crimson, Sandry, who had not slept, standing with furrowed brows on the office step, heard sounds of hoofs at the valley's head. He looked and beheld a cavalcade of horsesmen, riding with ease on their ragged ponies, and led by Siletz upon Black Bolt, who still stepped proudly after his day-and-night's journey, while Coosnah rolled with swinging ears at his side.

"Here," said the girl as she rode up, "they will work for the big contract." And she, shield down with a little sigh of weariness before Sandry could offer his arms.

"Gosh!" said Daily to himself in the shadow of the office, "the Siwashese!"

"Mr. Sandry," he said to the owner when the long tables were filled in every place with the best of the vanishing tribe that Siletz could pick, "I'm kickin' myself that I didn't think of the Indians myself, though Lord knows if we can whip 'em in line, for it would take the devil himself to make a Siwash work."

But it did not take his majesty. It took only the word of Kolawmie, who had given a command which a quiet half-breed who seemed the leader of the crew artlessly repeated to Sandry.

"We will work till the contract's saved," he said, "in giving to you we give to Siletz, who is your woman." And Sandry, astounded beyond measure, opened his mouth and closed it without speech.

And it was work indeed for all. Sandry himself, as he had grimly threatened once, "learned how" and tended hook. Collins took Hastings' place at the reading donkey, selecting a slim, brown boy as fireman, while the foreman proved his worth a dozen times over, by being everywhere at once, by fling things down to the most rigid system, by planning, executing, finishing, with the hand and mind of an artist.

It would have been contrary to human nature if Sandry had not felt a thrill of triumph when he next ran across Hampden at Toledo.

The Yellow Pines owner grinned.

"Siwashese!" he said insolently. "Siwashese!"

"Yes," flamed the younger man, "Siwashese—but I have five million feet of logs at the mouth of my slough! I'll float my contract on time, Mr. Hampden—and then I'll look into the little matter of my East Belt."

That day he got his first letter from Poppy Ordway. It was heavy and satiny and it breathed an insidious perfume.

Also it was brilliant with excitement and hinted at great things.

"I'm certain Hampden's crooked," she wrote; "I've found a man who knows him—and he's in the commissioner's office. He's young and he's susceptible and he thinks I'm one of the 'ring'. Oh, but it's exciting. I passed him a tip—just that the way you men would say it?—that I had a 'snap' in view, but that I already had a homestead in Arizona—and the thing progresses. The mention of Hampden and 'snap' did for him—and I'm all but over the brink of a fraudulent entry even now. He's offered—in my case, specially—to come down on the price of my patent two hundred dollars—of course clandestinely; I'm to say nothing about it to the 'ring'. Ye gods! I'm wild with the luck. More later."

February was passing. The days of fitful sunlight were becoming more frequent. The camp was humming with business. Silent, bent on the thing in hand, the Indians worked without need of encouragement.

The slough was bank-full and its surface was covered from dawn to dark with a floor of logs slowly drifting on every tide downward to the backwater.

them here and there. The mass of chains covered the bottom of the cradle a few feet apart.

Twelve men worked continually at the great marine monster, packing the logs inside the cradle, carrying the giant chains up and over the snug floor reached the top, facing the whole together and at last lifting the center gently, thus giving to the thing its likeness to a vast cigar.

A timber-scaler, sent down by the Portland firm, was constantly in attendance.

A shack had been thrown up at the head of the raft and a watch was kept by day and night.

"We can't trust Hampden a minute," John, said Sandry, "I'm learning suspicion." Indeed he was learning many things. Only John Daily in the sanity of his just nature watched this Johnny Eastern take his rough knocks and come up with his teeth set.

Those two were growing together in a slow affection. The big room had, in a sense, become home to Sandry, and the evenings when Ma sat in her little rocker and Siletz braided her mats with Coosnah beside her flled his toil-worn soul with peace.

The Preacher had slipped away as silently and mysteriously as he had come, with a blessing upon all and a promise to return—"when you shall need me, my children."

CHAPTER XV.

"There is No Law for a Genius." March came in like a lamb with delicate weather, crystal clear and opal bright, and with it came Miss Ordway. Sandry was glad to see her, but the critical point was at hand and he scarce took time to eat or sleep from the great work of the contract.

The mammoth raft was ready, the largest, according to Daily, that the camp had ever sent out in all its life, and a special boat from the Portland Mills company would lay off Yaquina to receive it on the sixteenth.

On the night of the second, Daily caught a glimmer of white on the lintel. It was a paper, stuck in with a thumb-tack.

"Watch your raft," it said, "for powder."

That was all, and it was unsigned. Daily told Sandry of the incident and showed the warning.

So for the remaining nights the great raft was lighted from end to end and four of the Indians patrolled it in shifts, armed with rifles and under orders to shoot at the first sign of trouble.

The work went forward rapidly. The Siwashese, born and raised in the timber country, knew all the work of the camp and they needed no driving. They were a godsend to Sandry in the pressing days and he came to look upon them with a wide tolerance.

"In serving you we serve Siletz," he quoted to himself, "for she's your woman." And an odd sensation prickled his skin, tingled at the roots of his hair. Some way, somehow, these were Siletz people—these silent, shiftless, well-taught creatures, who made no use of their talents, yet who did hard, unnecessary labor at the call of the blood.

That night, with the raft and even the two engines under guard and all the length of track patrolled, he came in tired, worn to a thin edge with sleeplessness, tense and taut as a singing wire, to meet Miss Ordway.

She slipped her hand into his arm with a little, familiar gesture and turned him about.

"Come along and relax," she said, "you're almost hysterical."

"I believe I am," said Sandry wearily, though as he stepped out into the night, soft already with the breath of spring as 'is the way with the coast country, where the seasons shoulder each other suddenly for place, he looked uneasily for Siletz.

"Let's go up to the old millway. It's deserted and I have things to tell you—oh, many things!"

She laughed, her little rippling laugh that was so soft and rich, and it soothed the man's strained nerves like a narcotic.

Miss Ordway sat down, or rather climbed up, on a log that lay beside the millway and drew her gray broadcloth aside.

Sandry settled himself beside her and took off his hat. The soft, changed breath of the night air was grateful to him.

"Why—well! I'll be thankful when this strain is over, that raft headed out to sea and my contract fulfilled! I never knew business was so strenuous."

Miss Ordway looked at him through the dusk with admiring eyes.

"But look how you're succeeding! Why, it's great!"

"Yes—but for how much of it can I thank myself? Hampden has me in a bad hole about my great East Belt—the best timber in the region and the base, practically, of the Dillingworth's future—and but for these Indians I would be now—well, I hate to think where I'd have been."

"Sh!" said Miss Ordway, "not so fast about that had hole. Instead, Mr. Walter Sandry, we've got your friend Hampden in the deepest hole he was ever in in all his life. In fact, when we say the word, he'll turn over the East Belt with both hands."

Sandry held out a hand and Miss Ordway took it, not after her usual manner of half-faltering, but with a gentle, proprietary motion. She tapped the breast of her princess gown.

"I have right here copies of filings on sixteen claims, all duly put through by 'cash entry' by as many different men—and I know that Hampden owns all these numbers, that he furnished the money for building the cabins, for filing fees, for advertising, for final proofs at the land office and for the government price of the land. In return for all this these bogus entry-men—your drifting gentry of the apked boots and the 'turkey' in most cases—received four hundred dollars each for the breaking of their faith with the government. No wonder Hampden is rich!"

For a long moment Sandry sat in a silence so deep that he ceased to breathe. He was grasping the magnitude of the man's daring—the gigantic risk he ran with his safety in the uncertain hands of sixteen men.

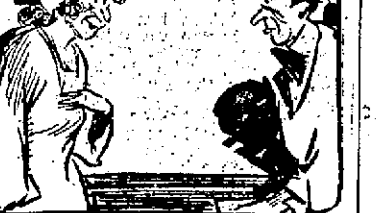

And also he was beginning to comprehend, wonderingly, the daring of this woman, her finesse, her cleverness and her success.

BRONCHITIS, BRONCHIAL ASTHMA AND SEVERE COUGHS PROMPTLY RELIEVED

With Best Home-Made Medicine—128 Teaspoonful—50 Cents.

One of the most dangerous things to neglect is a Cold or Severe Cough. If treatment is commenced promptly with the proper remedy, both are easily cured, but if neglected they oftentimes develop into Pneumonia or Consumption, or some Chronic Bronchial affection. Most persons neglect treating themselves for the principal reason that they either don't think it serious enough to go to a doctor, thinking it will get well itself without treatment, or don't know what good medicine to buy at a drug store, and if something more serious doesn't develop, it becomes deep seated through this neglect, and hangs on the whole winter, when it might have been speedily cured, had Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectant been used promptly.

No risk whatever is run in buying this remedy as Schiffmann's Pharmacy will refund your money if it does not give perfect satisfaction, or is not found to be the very best remedy you have ever used for stubborn Coughs, Colds, Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough and Hoarseness.

This new remedy is altogether different from any other kind, and is so strongly concentrated that two ounces (50c worth), make a full pint, 128 teaspoonful of excellent cough medicine, by simply mixing it at home with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water. It makes a whole family supply, while bottles of the old-fashioned, ordinary, ready-made kind, of doubtful merit and without a guarantee usually only hold from 20 to 32 teaspoonfuls. It is prepared from strictly harmless plants and is so pleasant that children like to take it and it can be given them with perfect safety as it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics, as do most cough mixtures. All druggists of this city sell it under the same "Money Back" guarantee as the famous Asthmador. R. J. Schiffmann, Proprietor, St. Paul, Minn.

There was no response. "John Stackpole!" The stout man stirred again. "Go down in a minute," he drowsily called. "Keep things hot for me."

The pastor's voice rang out: "You're going down, all right, John Stackpole," he roared, "and things will be kept hot, very hot for you! Let us now sing the ninety-ninth hymn."

"This little dress is one that my sister sent to me. We have always exchanged our discards. It gives us both a greater variety," Olive spread out a dark blue foulard before Molly. "There is not much wear in this winter. It is as you can see that it has begun to break." Olive held the goods up to the light. "That will never show, and you can wear that a great deal this winter. It is a lovely piece of goods," commented Molly, taking a fold of the silk between her fingers. "The pity of it is that I can not make use of it this winter. Jesse would not have sent it to me if she had known." Olive paused and looked down. Molly made no reply, so Olive leaned over and whispered something in her ear. "Indeed! How lovely," Molly smiled into her friend's happy eyes. "And so," continued Olive after an expressive silence, "if I have no use for the dress, it is rather narrow in the skirt and will be out of the question next year. I was thinking," Olive paused, embarrassed. "Will you promise not to be offended at what I say?" she continued after an awkward pause. "Offending? How could I be offended at anything you would say," replied Molly in surprise. "That is true," Olive looked brightly into her friend's face. "We are such friends. You have let me share your intimate life. I have not been able to help much, but it was not because I did not want to. Now I think I can see a way to give you a little pleasure and am half afraid to speak because you might not understand. I would not hurt you for anything," Olive paused and took Molly's hand in hers. "You could not hurt me; I know your good heart too well." "Thank you. That is a real compliment. Will you tell me what I had in my mind. I was thinking that you are about my size and with a little altering this dress would fit you very well. No one here has ever seen it, and you could wear it to our little neighborhood club meetings and look very stunning. Would you take it?" Olive looked anxiously into Molly's face. Molly flushed scarlet, and looked down. "I have hurt you after all," exclaimed Olive, laying her hand on her shoulder. "No, dear friend, I understand the kind heart that prompted the offer. Let me do something to help you in payment. Then I can take the dress and enjoy it," Molly held the soft folds of the silk against her face. "I used to be able to wear dark blue very well." "You can yet. It is very becoming. As to helping, there are lots of things you can help me make before next fall. Now try it on. I want to see how it fits you." The change was soon made, and Olive expressed herself as greatly pleased with the effect. "It will have to be shortened a little and that will give a new look to the hem, and as you are such a little thing, we can have a few more gathers in the back by making it smaller around the waist. It is very becoming," Olive could not have been more pleased with the most elaborate costume for herself. "I am especially pleased, because John always used to notice my clothes and I have had none for him for a long while," Molly was in a flutter of excitement. "I'll pin it up ready for you to hem before you take it off. Then you can have it ready to wear right away." Olive dropped down on the floor to hang the skirt. "Thank you, dear friend. Your loving thought of me is the greatest part of my pleasure," said Molly as she ran down the steps.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

MEASLES.

The death rate from measles is higher than that from scarlet fever, notwithstanding popular notions to the contrary. Pneumonia as a complication and tuberculosis as a sequel of measles renders the disease a serious one. Any one knowing of a case of measles or scarlet fever should report it to the health department. A mother who would conceal such a disease and return the child to school before the chance of contagion has passed ought to be punished to the full extent of the law. Too many children have been sacrificed to this selfish kind of cruelty.

From the time of exposure until the appearance of the first sign of illness there is an period of seven to eighteen days—much longer than in the case of scarlet fever. The onset is with cold, a common "cold." The "cold" lasts three or four days, with slight feverishness, sneezing, running at the nose, some cough, redness of the eyelids and coated tongue. The doctor can see certain spots (Koplik's spots) in the mouth at this stage which elude the diagnosis before the skin rash appears about the fourth day—like little flea bites on the forehead and face. The spots can be felt under the fingers. Unlike scarlet fever, a day or two after the whole body is covered with the blotchy, irregular rash, which also breaks out inside the bronchial tubes and throat, increasing the cough and feverishness and restlessness. The contagion is spread by the secretions from mouth, throat or chest—not by the skin rash. The child should have all the cold water he can drink. This talk about "the measles going in" is just an old wives' yarn. It comes from the fact that, when a child with measles develops pneumonia or some other serious complication, the parents, in their anxiety, often give the child a cold remedy, which increases the fever and the rash fades—as a result, not as a cause of the complication. The eyes are very irritated. They should be bathed often with warm acid solution (tablespoonful of boric acid dissolved in a pint of boiled water). If the lids stick together smear them lightly with sterile vaseline from a collapsible tube.

The factor of safety in measles is beyond all question, cold, fresh air. That is Nature's preventive against pneumonia. Give the patient all the fresh air there is. Keep the patient comfortably clothed, no sweating under an excess of blankets. In both scarlet fever and measles the patient should have a cleansing bath, a sponge bath in bed, at least once a day. For the application of the skin should be directed by the attending physician.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
I have a child with measles on the face. G. J. B. I have been advised to go to a skin specialist. Will you please recommend one for me?
Answer—Because any family physician can treat you as well or better than a specialist. Leave it to the family doctor to send you to a specialist, if necessary.

RAISE FUNDS FOR INTERNATIONAL MEET FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Tokio, Nov. 8.—Premier Count Okuma presided yesterday at a meeting of over 300 prominent business men of Tokyo and Yokohama who came together primarily to raise funds for the International Sunday school conference to be held in Tokyo in October 1916. The large number of delegates expected from all over the world and other expenses would require about $32,000. Of this amount $3,500 would be needed to enlarge the premises of the Young Men's Christian Association at Tokyo where the convention will be held.

Shibusawa and other business men proposed to raise the required amount and further more to place houses or villas in their possession at the disposal of the guests. They have greatly pleased the organizers of the convention as the question of accommodation has been the most difficult of all on account of the absence of sufficient hotels. An executive committee of nine has been appointed to push on the arrangements. Among the delegates expected are Sir Robert Laidlaw, president of the World's Sunday School Union of Great Britain as well as a large number of eminent religious workers and delegates from the United States, Great Britain, France, Russia, India, Australia and China.

When Della Scored.
Former Mistress—"I would like to give you a good recommendation, Della, but my conscience compels me to state that you never got the meals on time. I wonder how I can put it in a nice sort of way." Della—"Yes, might just say that O! got the meals the same as O! got me pay."—Puck.

The bottom of the skirt is edged with cordine and a frill of taffeta.

Household Hints

HONEY RECIPES.
Honey Jumble—Two quarts flour, three tablespoons melted lard, one pint honey, one-fourth pint molasses, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth pint water, vanilla to suit taste. Mix together and bake in moderate oven.

Honey Eggless Cake—One cup sugar, one-half cup honey, one cup sour milk, two tablespoons butter, one cup chopped dates, two cups chopped dates, teaspoon soda, two and one-half cups flour, spices to taste. Mix and bake thirty minutes.

Honey Crabapple Jelly—Boil apple with a little water. Squeeze, then add one-half cup honey, one-half cup sugar to one cup juice. Boil twenty minutes. Pour into glasses. Delicious.

Baked Honey Custard—Beat five eggs, add one-half cup honey, four cups scalded milk, one-eighth teaspoon powdered cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Bake in cups in water, in moderate oven.

SANDWICHES.
Lemon Sandwiches—Trim crust from a loaf of fresh bread. Put in a cookie jar, covered lightly with butter. Spread with half pound butter with grated lemon, wrap in waxed paper and lay in jar with bread. Cover until next day. Rub the butter till soft, add juice of one lemon with four tablespoons of chopped parsley. Spread on bread and cut in desired shape.

THE TABLE.

Potato-Lamb Dish—Slice raw potatoes, put in baking dish that has been buttered, sprinkle with salt, pepper, add small pieces of butter and some water. Set in oven till turns light brown on top. Take three or more nice thick lamb chops, salt them lightly and lay on top of potatoes. When brown on top, turn over and brown on other side and keep enough water on potatoes to keep moist. The juice from the meat makes them a fine flavor. Serve in dish in which they are baked.

Tomato Con-Corn—Four tomatoes, one-half cup water, one onion, two ears corn, one-fourth box spaghetti, one-fourth pound round steak, one teaspoon olive oil, two teaspoons grated cheese. Cook tomatoes and onion fifteen minutes, then add steak and spaghetti; cook fifteen minutes. About ten minutes before serving add corn and cheese. Sprinkle with butter of size of walnut.

Snowball Biscuit—Four teaspoons flour, two tablespoons butter or lard, a little salt. Mix together, then add four teaspoons baking powder, add lightly through the flour, add one and one-half teaspoons sweet milk. Mix and roll out as quickly as possible. Bake in hot oven with good baking powder is used this recipe never fails.

Eggless Cake—One cup sugar, one cup sour milk, four and one-half cups flour, one-half cup butter, one cup chopped raisins, nutmeg and cinnamon to taste, one tablespoon two cups flour. Bake in loaf in moderate oven.

FOR THE BABY.
Get a store box about three feet square and eighteen inches deep. See that inside and edge are made very smooth. Cut square to fit, from better parts of corn cobs, cover with washable material and knot closely; these make easily laundered pads for bottom.

Place baby and his playthings inside. If he is inclined to throw them out, fasten by strings or ribbons to edge of box so that he may haul them in again if he likes.

By holding to edge of box he will learn to walk and will be practicing meantime from cold and drafts to which a creeping baby on the floor is always exposed; also from fire, hot liquids and many things of which the little child who has the range of the house is always in danger.

If the baby has not previously been spoiled he will be happy and contented in his little pen.

A DIFFERENT AUTO RIDE.

"I had the loveliest auto ride last week," a friend of mine said to me recently. "So," I inquired. "Where did you go?" She named a place only fifteen miles away. "I thought you had been there a good many times." "Not as I went last week." "What was the difference?" "The machine."

It was the Driver That Made It Different. She laughed. "No, the driver. My dear, except through the out-lying of the city where it isn't pretty, I don't believe we went more than fifteen miles an hour, once." "It was Wilhelmina's car," she went on. "You know I've driven a great deal with various friends, but never went with her before, and it was a revelation of how much pleasure you can get out of a drive, if you don't feel you must rush every minute."

"We went quite swiftly through the city, but the minute we got out on those lovely country roads we slowed down and enjoyed it. You wonder why I should enjoy a drive that I must have taken so many times. My dear, it didn't seem like the same road; it all looked so different when I really had a chance to see it. There's a lovely little house that's always just a white flash when we rush past it. Wilhelmina went particularly slow there because she knows I'm interested in houses like that, and I got several ideas for my little house of dreams."

They Actually Stopped the Car. "Then at a certain bend in the road there is as lovely a view as I ever saw at home or abroad. I always knew it was attractive, but I never had the faintest idea how beautiful it was, because I've never had more than a twenty-mile-an-hour glimpse of it. And what do you think, Wilhelmina actually stopped the car there! She says they always are out to see how much ground you can cover, but Wilhelmina is out to see how much happiness you can get, and if anyone in the machine wants to stop, she stops willingly. We stopped twice—once to look at a house someone was interested in, and once to pick some flowers. Just think of it!

So Slow They Could Get The Fragrance. "And, my dear, the most remarkable thing of all, we went so slowly that we could actually get the fragrance. You know when you walk you often get the odors of the woods and fields, but you never do in a machine, or if you do they're gone before you can place them. There was the smell of ripe grapes, and the smell of a bonfire, and the elderly smell of over-ripe apples. I loved it! "My dear," she came to a sudden conscience-stricken pause, "how I have been running on things you love to rush, and think I'm a crank. Do you?" "Well," I answered in all truthfulness, "I'll tell you what I've been thinking, and you may judge for yourself."

"What?" "That I knew Wilhelmina well enough to ask her to take me to ride some day."

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have a beautiful daughter eighteen years old who graduated from high school last evening. She spent the summer visiting an aunt in another state, but now she has returned home. Her father says he will not allow her to stay at home, and do nothing—that she must get to work and earn her own living. She has always been ambitious to send this daughter to college, but my husband was opposed to letting her leave home, and he would not plan for her going away. A business money. I certainly do not want her to work and she doesn't want to, but her father insists. Can you suggest any argument to convince him that work is hardening to a young girl?

(2) My husband says that she can go to business college and prepare for stenography if she wants to, and he will pay her expenses, or she can get to work at something else at home. He says she has to work, what would you suggest?

(3) Do you think a working girl has as much chance to get married as one who stays at home?

ANOTHER.
(1) I think that every girl should have experience as a business woman before she marries. It gives her an idea of management and the value of money which she can get in no other way. A business experience also fortifies her against poverty. Often a husband is sick or dies and a wife has to earn the living for herself and family. If she has had experience she has very little difficulty in getting a position while the woman who knows nothing but housework can only keep boarders, and at this she usually fails because she does not know the business side of the work and is not a good manager.

Work is not hardening to a girl who has the guidance of wise parents and the protection of a good home. And it is not hardening to many others but of course there is a greater tendency for hardness to creep into the life of a girl who has to put her small earnings into room and board and has not the encouragement of a home.

(2) Stenography equips a girl for something definite. I would advise it.

(3) Yes, she has as much chance to get married and perhaps more, because she has opportunity to make friends at work as well as at the social gatherings she attends away from work. Besides, worth while men have more respect for girls who try to pay their own way.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am troubled with blackheads and pimples. Can you tell me what will help them? I am very careful to wash my face thoroughly morning and night, but whenever I have been out where it would get dirty.

(2) Is coffee bad for the complexion? I drink it every morning and noon, and I do not see how it

Rich, Dark Hair With Sage Tea

Your gray, faded hair will come back quickly to its natural rich, dark color if you apply Sulpho-Sage. This good, old-fashioned sage tea and sulphur mixture, so highly recommended by specialists, works so gradually and so evenly that no one will know that you are using it. Entirely unobtrusive, perfectly harmless. Stops dandruff, itching scalp, restores luster, beauty, richness, and softness to the hair. 50c. drug stores. Refund price $1.00. WHY NOT?

KC is pure. KC is healthful. It really does make lighter, nicer biscuits, cakes and pastry than the old fashioned single acting baking powders.

And you pay only a fair price for it. No baking powder should sell for more.

SEEK LEGISLATION AGAINST INFANTILE BLINDNESS IN STATE

Find That Disease Is Easily Preventable With Proper Treatment at Birth.—State Is Leader.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 8.—Through the state board of health, Wisconsin is endeavoring to prevent infantile blindness, which amounts to 25 to 40 per cent of all cases of blindness in the state. It is estimated there are 2,000 blind persons in Wisconsin, and the majority of the eyes at birth, known as ophthalmia neonatorum, is easily preventable. At a cost of two cents and two minutes' time, at the child's birth, immeasurable misery, suffering and sorrow during a lifetime in the dark are avoided. The cost of educating Wisconsin's blind children is upwards of $40,000 a year, in addition to the cost of maintaining the workshop.

Wisconsin is a leader in legislation against infantile blindness. The state gives $1,500 a year to provide silver nitrate free to all physicians, midwives and nurses. Two drops of a 1 per cent solution in the eye at birth is in nearly every case an absolute remedy for ophthalmia neonatorum. Since the distribution was authorized by the 1913 legislature, 300,000 ampules have been sent out. In only few states is this preventive required. In less than a dozen states, including Wisconsin, to report to the local health officer the birth of a child, and midwives required to report this disease to the state board of health. The departments of child hygiene of the Milwaukee and Cleveland boards of health are the only ones outside of Massachusetts to take up the reporting of cases.

Blindness rarely occurs if the disease is properly treated at the beginning. Frequent cleaning of the eyes, and the use of silver nitrate, if commenced in time and done properly, will with rare exceptions insure a perfect recovery. Those in charge are required to report to the local board of health the fact of inflammation, swelling, redness or unnatural discharge of the eyes occurring within two weeks after birth. All cases of this disease should be reported as scarlet fever, diphtheria or other dangerous contagious diseases. The state board of health supplies detailed instructions for the use of silver nitrate and the care of the eyes of new-born infants.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Nov. 8, 1875.—The cotton factory chimney is to be made twenty feet longer and the workmen began to work today. This increase in height is necessary in order to give the furnace more draft. Dr. Fox returned Saturday from Minnesota, where he attended Mr. Lilly, who had his right foot smashed on Thursday by being run over by the car. The foot was amputated immediately above the ankle. He is in a comfortable position now and the doctor goes there this afternoon and will hold next week.

Miss Goodell has been designated by Judge Conger as the person to defend two criminals whose trials will be held next week.

BOUNDARY TREATY BETWEEN ENGLAND AND CHINA, ISSUE

Men Designated by Chinese President to Represent China in Negotiations to Settle Dispute.

Peking, Nov. 3.—President Yuan Shi-Kai has issued a mandate designating Alfred Sze, Chinese minister to the court of St. James, Chinese plenipotentiary in negotiations which are to be resumed very shortly in London between Great Britain and China for the settlement of pending claims regarding Outer and Inner Tibet.

In the autumn of 1913 the representatives of Great Britain, China and Tibet held a conference at Simla for the purpose of agreeing upon the boundary between Outer and Inner Tibet, and settling the status of autonomous, or Outer Tibet. Great Britain and Tibet reached an understanding, but China failed to ratify the treaty at that time, not being willing to concede as much territory as was demanded.

Great Britain is especially anxious that Outer Tibet be maintained as a buffer state between India and the great, unsettled country in the heart of Asia. Her interest is much the same that Russia has in keeping Outer Mongolia as a buffer between Siberia and enterprising foreign powers which may encroach upon Asiatic soil, as well as a protection against wandering tribes of bandits.

Outer and Inner Tibet are divisions of Tibet not generally recognized as yet and the two designations grew out of the Simla conference. Outer Tibet, roughly speaking, is the portion of Tibet adjoining India. Inner Tibet is the more northern portion. England desires that Outer Tibet shall be under China's suzerainty, merely, and not under China's sovereignty. England wants Outer Tibet to be permitted to conduct its own domestic affairs and would limit the number of Chinese troops which may remain in the territory.

Having a complete understanding with Russia as to the division of interests in Central Asia, England is free to direct affairs in Tibet such as she chooses, and along similar lines to those Russia has adopted in Mongolia. As China has frequently been unable to keep peace in Tibet within recent years and India was overrun at various times by Tibetans, Great Britain required China to enter into an agreement to maintain peace and assure the Tibetans China would not try to make Tibet a Chinese province.

During the trouble incidental to the establishment of the Chinese republic the Tibetans became so turbulent that India entered into direct negotiations with the Dalai Lama, ignoring China's claim upon the country. Later England prevented China from sending troops into Tibet to subdue it and before Great Britain recognized the Chinese republic she required assurances that the republic would settle Tibetan affairs satisfactorily.

Out of this pledge grew the Simla conference, whose action China refused to ratify. Lieutenant-Colonel Sir A. H. McMahon presided at the conference and represented England. Ivan Chen was the Chinese conferee, and Long Chen Shatra, the prime minister of Tibet, was the Tibetan member.

Although the agreement which England and Tibet worked out, and which China refused to sign, was never published in full it is generally known that China's greatest objection to the proposed treaty was the awarding to Tibet of a large territory which China claims as her own. Inner Tibet is known to have claimed practically all of the district described on the maps as Kokonor. China insists she is absolute owner of this territory and does not have the slender hold upon it which has caused her so much trouble in the case of Tibet proper. If China be required to yield Kokonor, Inner Tibet will extend to the boundary of Szechuen, the most western and the richest of all the provinces in Central China.

The territory in dispute is so great that boundary lines 500 and even 1,000 miles long are in controversy. Tibet is estimated to have an area of 500,000 square miles by the most conservative explorers and the figure is placed as high as 700,000 by some geographers. It is at least twice as large as Texas and possible three times the size of the Lone Star State. New York State is less than one-tenth the size of Tibet.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If Your Back is Aching or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water And Eat Less Meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood, in 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.
